What's Your Excuse?

Looking ONLY at excuses that generate from within ones self, about one's self.
Definition;
A reason or explanation put forward to defend or justify a fault or offense.
Generally speaking, excuses within ones self relates to backsliding on a negativity that a person is trying to overcome.
When changing your mind, or rethinking from the mind in some act where you decide to lesson your highest excitement or passion in a decision.
Your highest excitement is one of success, and ANY excuse proposed is from your flesh-mind. The excuse lessons the highest expectations in the success that is truly wanted. That the highest excitement is backed by your true spiritual self that knows the truths.
Failure or compromise, giving into excuses, substantiates the "worldly" perspective. Further understanding would be taking the developed excuse from a past perspective and not the "living from the now" present time. Time, is a worldly construct and not recognized from the present because lifes "excitement" should be NOW.
No justification from the past, and no expectations for the future because the NOW will always be in its highest excitement. The future will automatically be the highest excitement of life. Living from your spiritual self does not serve excuses.
